SAR and University of National and World Economy launch project to support the integration of young refugees

The State Agency for Refugees has partnered with the University of National and World Economy (UNWE) on a project aimed at integrating young refugees through training. UNWE won the project “I Learn, I Connect, I Succeed: Integration of Young Refugees through Training”, financed under the program “Sofia – City of Youth and the Active,” 2025.

The project focuses on identifying the main educational needs of people seeking or granted protection in Sofia Municipality. Based on these needs, a series of thematic trainings will be organized to raise awareness among young refugees, promote intercultural dialogue, and support social inclusion.
