Government adopts proposal to amend act on temporary protection

The government adopted a proposal for the Act Amending the Temporary Protection of Displaced Persons. The act reduces administrative burdens and ensures greater systemic consistency by aligning the conditions for assistance with those applicable to citizens of Slovenia and beneficiaries of international protection.

At the same time, it strengthens the protection of the most vulnerable groups by allowing accommodation for unaccompanied minors to be extended until the age of 21 and by maintaining the basic level of financial assistance for private accommodation and pocket money for the most vulnerable groups of persons, including older people, persons unable to work and persons with disabilities. The amendment also seeks to prevent secondary movements of beneficiaries of temporary protection by taking into account, when granting assistance, the period during which temporary protection was recognised in another EU Member State.

The act continues to ensure an adequate level of assistance and support for persons granted temporary protection for the first time in Slovenia.
