The Lithuanian Red Cross published its 2025 monitoring report, which focuses on challenges faced by third-country nationals applying for international protection at the border. The report highlights that the SBGS needs to improve transparency, specifically on the use of body cameras (an issue which was also observed by the Ombudsperson and the Supreme Court) and other barriers when filing an application at the designated access points, e.g. suspending access to pedestrians at the Medininkai and Šalčininkai border-crossing points.

The report mentions the number of asylum applications which are accepted from Russian and Belarusian nationals. Despite the unchanged situation in the countries, the number decreased to almost 0 due to clearer security checks. Finally, the paper focused on the possibility to apply for asylum at the Minsk embassy, a practice which was the subject of a complaint directed to the Ombudsperson.
