Greek and Hungarian ministers discuss support in border security and migration management

Hungary and Greece declared their readiness to prevent irregular migration, strengthen internal security and protect external borders effectively. The two ministers agreed that migration can be only addressed through an integrated, whole-of-route approach.

The two countries are currently assessing how Hungary could more effectively support Greek efforts in the areas of border security and migration management. Hungary expressed its readiness to provide border police officers, immigration police experts and related technical equipment.

To achieve common goals and intensify cooperation on innovative solutions, Hungary and Greece are ready to fully utilise the Memorandum of Understanding on cooperation in migration and asylum and on the exchange of liaison officers, signed in 2025.
