RSA and PRO ASYL publish report on access to documents and socio-economic rights for beneficiaries of international protection

According to an annual report published by the Refugee Support Aegean (RSA) and Stiftung PRO ASYL, beneficiaries of international protection in Greece face barriers in accessing documentation and socio-economic rights. According to the press release accompanying the report, “constant barriers to a dignified life for recognised refugees in Greece include a bureaucratic maze to obtain essential documents, the absence of housing, and restrictions on access to health care and other core services.”
