The Ministry of Inclusion published instructions for holders of a temporary residence permit based humanitarian grounds and its transition to other types of residence permits, in line with the policy of ending the systematic granting of humanitarian protection to some applicants who applied for international protection.

According to the new instructions, third-country nationals holding a temporary residence permit for exceptional circumstances for humanitarian reasons may apply for a temporary residence and work permit, accessing it without a visa. The submission of a change of permit should be submitted 2 months before the expiration of the permit up to 3 months after the expiration. The new authorisation will be valid for 4 years.

The instructions also refer to minors born in Spain of a mother or father holding a temporary residence permit based on humanitarian grounds, and minors who are not born in Spain or who are under guardianship.
