Federal Council launches consultations on amendments to strengthen labour market integration

The Federal Council launched a consultation on amendments to the Foreign Nationals and Integration Act (FNIA) to strengthen the labour market integration of individuals arriving through family reunification.

The proposal aims to better utilise the domestic workforce by requiring unemployed or inactive migrants to register with career guidance services, which will support their entry into employment and recognition of qualifications. At the same time, the government extended the Perspecta pilot programme until 2030 to assist qualified individuals in integrating professionally (supporting the recognition of their diplomas). The consultation will run until 12 August 2026.
