Finnish Immigration Service resumes decision-making for all applications by Iranian nationals

Following a reassessment of the security situation in the country of origin, the Finnish Immigration Service will resume decision-making for all applications for international protection by Iranian nationals as of 1 July 2026.

The examination of these applications has been suspended since February 2026, but based on updated information, the agency decided to resume processing. However, each application is assessed individually, and the Finnish Immigration Service aims to adopt a decision as soon as possible. There are currently around 100 pending applications by Iranian nationals.
