

Highlights of International Protection in Europe

Vol. 2, April-June 2026

Dear readers,

This edition of HIPE contains highlights of international protection recorded between April–June 2026, as reported in the Recent Developments page of the Database on International Protection in Europe (DIP).

We are also excited to announce that the EUAA has launched the second edition of the EUAA Case Law Grant for higher education institutions with asylum or human rights expertise (in possible partnership with legal clinics or research organisations). The deadline for the submission of proposals is 30 September 2026, 17:00 Brussels time. For details, please consult the EUAA Grants page and the EU Funding and Tenders Portal. The online info session on the call for proposals for EUAA's Case Law Grant can be found here.

We want to hear from you! Please take a moment to share your thoughts on HIPE email updates by completing this short survey.

Operationalisation of the EU Pact

The EU Pact on Migration and Asylum entered into application on 12 June 2026, marking a significant milestone in the reform of the Common European Asylum System. Ahead of the entry into application, the European Commission reported substantial progress by Member States in operationalising the Pact yet underlined remaining gaps.

During the reference period, legislative amendments to support the operationalisation of the Pact were adopted in Austria, Belgium, Croatia, Cyprus, Czechia, Estonia, Finland, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, Netherlands and Slovakia. The legislative process advanced towards adoption in France, Latvia, Lithuania and Portugal. Legislation for the operationalisation of Eurodac was adopted in Poland and Slovenia. While not EU Member States, Iceland, Norway and Switzerland also adapted their national legislation to align with the instruments of the Pact which are relevant to them.

Alongside legislative changes, countries implemented practical measures:

- In Latvia, the Office of the Ombudsman launched a project to establish an independent monitoring mechanism to safeguard fundamental rights during screening procedures, while the Office of Citizenship and Migration Affairs initiated a project to modernise reception infrastructure and improve support to asylum seekers to align national standards with the Pact.
- Cyprus and Lithuania signed a memorandum of cooperation on the relocation of applicants for international protection as part of the solidarity mechanism provided for by the Pact.
- Belgium's reception agency Fedasil launched a pilot project to establish an adapted reception path for applicants from low recognition rate countries which provides access to legal assistance and intensive support for voluntary returns.
- France's asylum authority consolidated asylum application forms into a single application form and published an updated list of safe countries of origin.
- The Dutch Minister for Migration and Asylum announced plans to reorganise asylum case processing to reduce waiting times by prioritising applications submitted after 12 June 2026.

Initiatives for integration in host society

In the second quarter of 2026, several EU+ countries introduced initiatives targeting beneficiaries and applicants for international protection. Denmark amended its Integration Act to strengthen municipal responsibilities for accommodation, health, employment support and integration governance of refugees and certain family-reunified third-country nationals. Norway adopted a new integration declaration for newly-arrived refugees and their family members, clarifying their rights, responsibilities and mutual expectations, and announced plans to explore measures to limit refugees from leaving their originally assigned municipality. Spain launched a new labour market integration initiative for beneficiaries and applicants for international protection linked to the red fruit agricultural campaign in Huelva,

Switzerland reported positive integration outcomes for refugees from private accommodations, and Italy launched a new call for applications for 300 scholarships for students with international protection status.

EU+ countries also introduced broader measures targeting migrants, which are also relevant for beneficiaries of international protection. For instance, Iceland adopted a legislative proposal on residence and work permits for foreign nationals, Switzerland launched a consultation to strengthen the labour market integration of individuals arriving through family reunification, and Greece introduced interpretation and intercultural mediation services in the health sector in the South Aegean Region. Norway appointed a committee to review Norwegian language training to improve migrants and refugees' labour market participation and introduced a new open application process to allocate funds to organisations working in the field of integration.

For the integration of former applicants and migrants staying without legal residence, Spain's State Secretariat for Migration and local authorities strengthened cooperation and information-sharing on the migrant regularisation process, also introducing face-to-face assistance for applicants and publishing Q&As on the regularisation procedure.

Temporary protection

Several EU+ countries amended or proposed changes to their temporary protection frameworks. Denmark and Iceland proposed legislative amendments, with Denmark seeking to restrict access to residence permits for temporary protection for certain Ukrainian nationals subject to military mobilisation, while Iceland is advancing a legislative proposal to introduce additional options for permanent residence permits after 1 year under the temporary protection scheme. Ireland approved new measures to phase out state-contracted accommodation for beneficiaries of temporary protection and reduce the Accommodation Recognition Payment (ARP) monthly contribution to €400 from October 2026. In addition, it announced a new alternative permission for those residing in the country under the Temporary Protection Directive and plan to support beneficiaries in preparing for the expiry of temporary protection. In Norway, decisions refusing the extension of residence permits under the collective protection scheme – the national form of protection equivalent to temporary protection – are no longer subject to an appeal, while Finland introduced rules preventing holders of residence permits based on temporary protection to simultaneously hold other types of residence permits. Slovakia approved amendments aligning national legislation with EU law and addressing the status of beneficiaries following the end of temporary protection.

Several countries adopted measures to support the transition from temporary protection.

Czechia began processing applications for the special long-term residence permit which are available to holders of temporary protection, offering a more stable residence status. Poland updated rules on access to healthcare for Ukrainian citizens and announced that applicants for the CUKR residence card, previously beneficiaries of temporary protection, will be required to apply for residence through the new MOS Portal. Switzerland adopted amendments to improve labour market access for beneficiaries of protection status S and launched a consultation on the future of the status.

In terms of practical support, Germany set up a Unity Hub to provide counselling for beneficiaries on options to return to Ukraine or integrate in Germany, and to support Ukrainian community building.

Returns

Among developments having an impact on national asylum systems, the European Parliament approved the new Return Regulation on 17 June 2026. Ministers from Austria, Denmark, Germany, Greece and the Netherlands met at the Justice and Home Affairs Council to discuss common initiatives toward the creation of return hubs.

There were several legislative reforms at the national level:

- A bill in Denmark proposed measures to make deportation the general rule for certain serious offenders sentenced to 1 year imprisonment, introduced electronic ankle monitoring for non-compliant irregular migrants, strengthened voluntary repatriation and return support schemes.
- Finland's Aliens Act amendments expanded the grounds for deportation, limited the automatic suspensive effect of appeals and ended the right to work 30 days after a deportation decision is served unless a court suspends the deportation pending an appeal.
- New rules in Sweden allow for the temporary suspension of deportations instead of granting residence permits to certain individuals for whom a removal would be contrary to international conventions, including those who pose security threats - ensuring that they do not have the same rights as applicants for international protection while they await deportation.

- Norway circulated a consultation proposal on new regulations for returns and reintegration which would allow for a greater cooperation with Frontex, particularly on travel logistics and reintegration programmes.

Voluntary returns to Syria continued to be supported by various EU Member States, such as Austria, Cyprus and Greece.
